Dear Friends,

Welcome to our 10th anniversary “in person” Summit meeting! Our theme this year is “First, Do No Harm.” We have a very exciting agenda, with many of the world’s leading experts in patient safety joining us. We also continued our practice of including patients and their families in every part of our program.

Since the pandemic, we have noticed a growing momentum to “move the needle” in patient safety so we can have a safer healthcare system for both patients and healthcare workers. The WHO Global Initiative has taken off. President Biden’s PCAST subcommittee on patient safety has met, and we will hear some of the conclusions and recommendations. Since we began over 10 years ago, we’ve seen an increased number of patient safety organizations around the world focus on eliminating preventable harm in healthcare. It’s going to take each and every one of us to move the needle to ZERO harm.

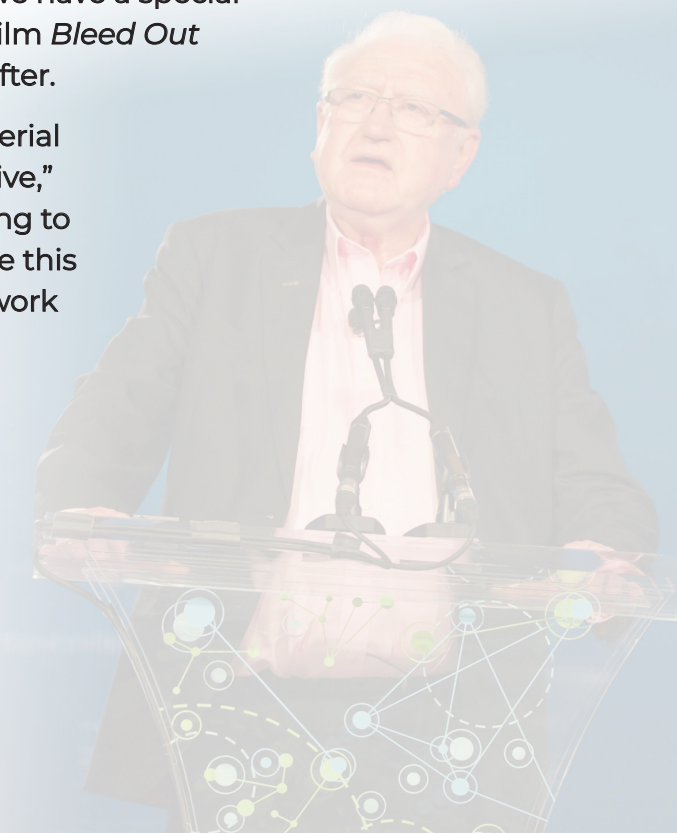

From an innovation standpoint, the MedTech industry really stepped up during the pandemic, and we saw the possibilities of telehealth and home monitoring. Today, technology is improving with artificial intelligence and machine learning. More and more accurate data on adverse events in healthcare are becoming available, and these data are the powerful stimulus we have been looking for to help motivate real change. We look forward to more aligned incentives and have proposed a National Patient Safety Board that you will learn more about at this Summit.

We are continually updating our Actionable Evidence-Based Practices and just launched our new website — www.psmf.org. We also have several new team members, including a new COO, Dr. Sanaz Massoumi.

In addition to the incredible speakers and panelists, we have a special screening of the award-winning HBO documentary film Bleed Out by filmmaker Steve Burrows and a Q & A discussion after.

Our Founder, Joe Kiani, said at the latest WHO Ministerial Summit: “Actions out of kindness are the most effective,” and I wholeheartedly agree. We look forward to getting to know you more in the next couple of days. Please take this unique opportunity to widen your patient safety network and let’s have an outstanding two days of learning, understanding, and networking.

Panel 1: Preventing Patient Harm: Predictive Analytics and Artificial Intelligence

The panel discusses the impact of predictive analytics and artificial intelligence on healthcare safety, both positive and negative. Can diagnosis be improved? Can accurate data on patient harm be obtained in a timely manner?

Moderator: Charlie Miceli
Nasim Afsar
Philip Lumb
Basil Matta
David Stockwell
Peter Ziese

Panel 2: President's Council of Advisors on Science and Technology

The panel discusses the areas of safety PCAST members focused on and the direction they took. Panel members will refer to some of the urgent changes that need to be made to make healthcare in the US safe.

Moderator: Joe Kiani
Ruth Ann Dorrill
Rachael Fleurence
Chris Hart
Peter Pronovost
Sue Sheridan

Panel 3: National Patient Safety Board

The panel discusses why a National Patient Safety Board is being recommended, its status, and what it should be able to do to make healthcare safer.

Moderator: Leah Binder
